

A question about the earth and its consciousness?

It's a big question. And the guidance is speaking to you, Pashan, as a sensor, and that really, human beings are sensors. All living creatures are sensors but the more conscious one is developing in their sensitivity and in their embodiment the more they are a sensor. And that your body is enjoined with the earth. It's enjoined with the whole dimension, therefore reading your body is reading the whole dimension. Reading your state of being is reading the whole state of being. So it is a big question and a good question. A confusing question too, in that reading your own state of being, and reading your own body, doesn't bring a real clarity to the bigger perspective. It's very subjective, which is why you asked, to move beyond the subjective to the greater understanding, to the greater perspective.

And to this, the guidance then brings me, and I've know idea why, I'm just going now, into the real center of the earth. And showing this great, like boiling, this great spinning, this great turning in the center. Its highly active in the center, in the dynamic core, in the highly energy charged core of the earth. It is spinning, it is moving, and spinning is the word that best gives me, gives it the best sense of this. It's spinning, it's not just the intensity of energy sitting in any kind of stillness. It's moving, it's moving and it's turning and it's beginning to turn the earth as though the whole earth is turned by that. It's turned in part by the movement within its core. And the movement within the core of the earth is its life. It's the life, it's not the biological life, it is the energetic, it is the force life of this dimension, of this sphere. It is the core of the earth that I am clumsily being shown that creates the entire magnetic field, the energy field of the earth, the force field of all beings. And it's moving, it's turning itself. And in this turning, it is re-identifying. The earth itself is re-identifying. The earth itself is reshaping itself. It is coming into a, in human terms, awakening. Coming into a consciousness of itself. It's coming into an alignment with itself that though it has oft repeated such things, has never done this with such consciousness. Not that the earth is a being comparable to you, but it is a being, and it is a being coming into a greater alignment. It is a being in service and involved in all beings in this dimension. So, really, by looking at this realignment, you're looking at the realignment that is occurring in every form, in every being, that's within this magnetic field. You are experiencing this realignment in your energetic field, in your magnetic field.

To the extent that one is welcoming the re-identifying of them self. In other words, welcoming the movement to greater consciousness, the more it will be felt, the more the spinning will be occurring in every aspect of your embodiment to the extent that there is stasis and unconsciousness. The movement of alignment will meet dead ends, dead pockets and dead inert substance. There is that, there are those beings both human and otherwise in all the dimensions of this dimension that carry inertness, that carry incapacity for realignment. It is the beginning of an ending, and it is the beginning of a beginning. And we show you the ending and we show you the beginning. For the alignment is the beginning. It is an alignment into the next phase of conscious form, the next phase of this dimension's consciousness. The earth itself becoming very alive as only it holds in memory. The earth itself becoming dynamically alive and less confined to molecular substance, more freed of molecular structure, more alive in the subtle energy, the field energy. And all beings becoming more alive in their subtle field, in their subtle nature and less bound to their molecular nature. This process will be occurring, we will not give you linear time, it will be occurring for several generations. It takes at least three generations for the new format to enter into the DNA. To enter into the norm of manifestation. And it is complex, layered with great detail. There are many that will face the inertness and surpass it. There is much grace given to allow those to surpass the inertness. There's time given for all forms to become aware of the ending and the inertness of their confined structures, their confined identity. And to glimpse, to see and to know the next step, to choose it.

The most conscious beings choose it now, are abreast of the alignment, in every second of it, in every moment and allow their entire inner identity and being to be carried, to trust, to realize and to know. Therefore your question is a valuable question and the understanding is valuable understanding. For all it can take for the inert unconscious to surpass is to be shown to understand. To know how to read the sensor of their being. And in reading the sensor of their being, to not resist. The actual practical experience for you, is to sense beyond the boundaries of yourself. To feel your subtle field larger and more attractive, more absorbent, more receiving. A greater knowing of what another feels. A greater sensing of what the beings around you are thinking and feeling. A sense that you are not a separateness. A sense that you are a part of all those you are feeling. A sense of buoyancy, of deep and absolute rightness, as the bondage identity departs. A loosening of fear. An understanding that death is not to be feared. Watching those die, especially of cancer, with no fear. Knowing they are in the transformation of identity, that they are on the crucible of the alignment.

Even watching the strife in the world and the great mass of deaths in the world without fear, knowing you are watching alignment and opportunity. You are watching the inert be given the choice to surpass inertness. You're watching birth. For none is lost and none is disregarded, as the literal earth shifts itself, realigns itself and those on the surface die. None is lost. In this great movement of realignment, none is lost, unless they chose it. And in choosing to remain unconscious, there is the pause, there is the waiting, there is the ushering into dimensions of unconsciousness, and the journey continues until it is no longer chosen. None is lost.

This realignment of the entire beingness, leaves grief as a memory in the distant past; there is no grief and there's no loss, there's no confinement, no separation, there is no sickness. The alignment shift that is occurring within all physical beings, within all the dimension, goes beyond illness. For the life force is freed. The life force is the dominant and the structural form is the sub-dominant. The structural form cannot dominate the life force, so there is no more illness.

For you to sit lightly and watch, do/to not need to say 'I am this', 'I am that', just be the one watching. Be the sensor in the joyous agreement to all that you are experiencing. Not needing to know where it will go. Not needing to limit it nor resist it. Laying your eyes open wider and wider and be carried, carried by the grace of your own karma, your own beauty. Trusting in that.

Thank you guidance.

Guidance, help me understand what I see and do alters the whole scheme, the divine plan.

The guidance takes me to a picture which I shall try to describe. If you were to dissolve all what you see physically in terms of Liz, Pashan, house, the earth, the trees, planets. If you were to dissolve all that structural vision and see it only as its energy, see it only as its light body, it's energetic form, you would be seeing tremendous streams and webs of a great fabric. You would be seeing great pulsing orbs of highly intricate streams of wave length and energy in which is held every conscious being and which is held every manifestation of aum; every manifestation of omniscient presence. Every manifestation is known to the entirety. Every manifestation is a wave length within the fabric, the absolute living fabric. When seen that way, when your eyes are not locked into seeing things in their physical form only, this question is easily understood. We watch your question itself, we watch it be a question that continues to move of a wave length throughout the vastness of this great living being, this fabric. This question is silver and beautiful, and it keeps ringing a bell as it travels. Your question has just been asked in the inner center of many beings that are resonant to you. Many beings that have come to the same resonant place of consciousness as you. Your question was just heard. Now, to all these resonant beings, this question may not come up in language of 'I want to ask this', but that question has just been opened up in all beings of resonant frequency to you. The potency of that question is 'How can I be more conscious for the development of grace, the development of divine perfection?' How can I play my part with more accuracy? By even what I think and what I say?

Your question is a very high vibratory question that has just opened up consciousness in many. And we are being literal; because we are showing her the wave length of your question and what happened with it. And that wave length, that question, that thought will stay as a resonant question until answered in all those beings, now. It needs to be answered. In all those beings it is a nudge now, and when it is answered, the question dissolves. The wave length disappears.

By allowing only the thoughts, only the actions and only the words of that which is based in compassion, based in true sincerity, for remembering the greater being, based in love. You become a potent part of bringing the entire manifest creation forward. With every quest you have, you implant that quest into all unconscious becoming conscious beings. And because your quest, your question, was towards true nature, it even carries momentum, it gathers momentum as its wave is received and heard. For all beings recognize truth. All beings are sensors of truth. It is their formation, their foundation stone.

Questions or quests of negative nature don't travel very far, aren't recognized by most beings. There are far less resonant beings with the negative turning, the downward turning, the dying. And yet even those questions can gather momentum in their own dark path, yet because they don't carry truth, they dead end and they curl in upon themselves. When they become answered they create death. When your question becomes answered it creates liberation. Therefore, conscious beings realize whatever occurs in your prayer, in your meditations and in your heart, is occurring in all resonant beings. And as you call yourself forward with diligence, you are calling within all others, and you assist all others forward.

This is potent knowledge. This is knowledge to be held with responsibility. Therefore in the past it was esoteric; hidden knowledge. For as soon as the asker becomes conscious of the living fabric, even more momentum is gained knowing that the question and the seeking you ask, is resonating in a thousand, thousand others. The responsibility lies then, in making sure that anything of weight, of intensity, and real meaning, that you speak, or think, or repeat in your actions and prayers, comes from compassion, is named by love, and is not self oriented.

The rule, which is contained in the golden rule, is that the outcome, the answer, the direction of every intention, every thought, every prayer and every action, serves all beings. And to the contrary, if it just serves one or two, if it just serves the self than it is of wrongness. It is the measurement to measure whether to allow, deepen, it is the measurement. Does it serve all beings or does it serve just a few?

Thoughts that are sent as wavelengths that only serve a few create unconsciousness in the great web. They lend weight to those that would just take the dark turning; the turning that curls in on itself and towards annihilation. Wasted energy. Wasted lifetimes. Annihilation of the thought, annihilation of the intention, yet never the being. The being sometimes exists in great stasis, sometimes in great pause, suspended in the unconsciousness and is given seven times seven opportunities to emerge. None is lost, yet the journey is slow, for so many choose the curved path that turns inward onto itself. Yet your voice, all of you Gabrielle, all of you, the angels that shouts and that awakens, let your consciousness enter into prayer. Shout the words of grace, words of awakening, in your inner space, and let it touch the whole web. Today even, don't be afraid. Don't be afraid of the dying; don't be afraid of the changing. Don't be afraid of losing your families. Don't be afraid of losing all that you know. And as the human being, in their collective being ness loses that fear, so does the earth carry you, carry all, into its new moments with no karma, with no trauma. This is the work of now. Sending the message into the collective being ness not to fear. Using images of the living light form, the angelic light body, that each being is; the freed, the brilliant eyes, the bodies with no illness. The body of the earth, vibrant and alive, flowering, sending those images to all. This is the preparation for the transition. Holding images of what's becoming.

Thank you Guidance.

What is the difference between being born and being reincarnated, the difference between coming in with karma to continually having ones lives based on the karma that we hold; and the other, being the re-incarnation being freed of the karma and coming back to serve.

I'll begin going with the words the Guidance are giving: There is a transition on the journey of all beings. The transition where their eyes are opening wide, where they are knowing, awakening as could be said. Becoming an all encompassing knowing of who they are, of what is, of what is left within their being to unfold and what has been their story. The ability within a being to see their whole story and to know how they fit into the entity of all being ness. How they are part of all beings. This transition, more literally, is the lifting of the veil of unconsciousness, the veil of illusion, of being a separate being, unaware of any other lifetime, unaware of their whole story, of their own lineage and of the their own distinct lineage of unfolding. A being who's come into this transition is entering into their embodiment with a consciousness, with a mission, a mission that is based on the whole. It is based on the knowing of their whole story, of the whole story. How can we put words to that? In choosing embodiment based in that consciousness they are essentially free; free to serve others. Free to serve the evolving entity of god being. They are freed of the entanglements within their own story and can apply their consciousness, their existence and their energy on the greater entity.

We firmly step back from naming it, re-born, re-incarnation. We firmly step back from the judgment on 'who is who'? We firmly step back from naming that transition as an absolute. We could say some beings, many beings, spend lives in that transition, lives with growing consciousness, knowing their karma, seeing it clearly, acting consciously to dissolve it. To be complete. Spending their life in service; serving both the greater entity plus their own individual being ness. That is a being in transition.

When a being is freed of the entanglements with lower nature, self nature, human nature and can exist fluently in divine nature, then they are in the absolute service of entity. There is no self to serve, there is only the great self in all the eyes of all the beings and all the creatures. That could be said; completion of that transition. The full entry into a life to serve. To serve with a liberation in the center of their presence. And yet, not to label that, to let that quietly be. Let that one be unlabeled, unnamed. Steer away from labeling and naming, measuring; where are you? Who are you? The fault in this system of naming, this system of measuring, is that only a fully omniscient being could ever see where this person is in their transition. How much unconsciousness still rides within their being? How much self nature threads itself through? That can be sensed by many but not fully known, yet by one who has full sight. One who has come to the freedom, and has the full sight.

Think of this answer and this question more as a transition, as though coming to the end of the river, walking towards the delta to the sea. Miles perhaps, watching the merging of sea to river, watching the landscape widen. Miles and miles, perhaps lives and lives, of the landscape of the widening, the greater remembering. The remembering that gathers momentum and the consciousness that gathers momentum. When the point of mergence to the sea comes, that quiet moment; who is to say? Beings that are full of unconsciousness, that don't remember their whole story, that don't remember beyond this life and yet live in full service, live in full heart and absolute faith that the way to exist is to serve and to love. That may be carrying pain, may be carrying dark dreams, may be carrying so much need for healing, and yet have committed themselves to service to others. Let go of trying to place anyone anywhere. Just realize the pilgrimage is miles and miles long, and their can be great lights of realization of the most simple nature in the most simple of beings. See the one who isn't even on the journey right now, sitting on the edge just cooking, serving for all the pilgrims. This one is in the full service of the light. This one is creating the actions of awakening, even from that point.

We would say one more thing. Step back from those that would name the placement of another being. Step back from those that name their place. Listen from your heart only. Listen to the love incarnate, and to the grace incarnate. Every being can know enough by listening to the love incarnate in another and the grace incarnate in another.

A question about origin. About originating not within this earth but elsewhere, wanting to ask about that; about the interplay between spheres of, planetary spheres and askingAre you asking of your origin or are you asking just generally?
(Now a different question asked by Pashan but recording doesn't pick it up).

This question brings a very different experience within me, in that I am being pulled back into seeing a landscape, a universal landscape and I'm looking at the earth. The guidance is showing me the earth in its formation, in its early formation. And I'll speak:

The earth was being formed with the perfect ingredients for flowering, for life to flower into beauty, into perfection. For the full cross-roads, the full mergence of atomic and spiritual matter. The perfect conditions for embodied consciousness, for the sons and daughters of God to exist. It was being formed as the jewel, the Promised Land, the place for the supreme consciousness to enter into form, and infuse form to be embodied, to be creative principle, to alter the course entirely of atomic unconscious matter by infusing it, lifting it, to it's fullest capacity to host supreme consciousness.

This is the purpose of this sphere, this planet, this jewel, with its conditions; its' conditions, its' position. Not just its' position to the sun but its' position within the universe. And this mapping we show her is very concentric, very vast, its' position in the universe. You could point to every consideration, and it was met. This sphere met every consideration to ultimate, ultimate; to bring forth the potential of supreme consciousness in embodiment. Yet this supreme consciousness, this highly conscious entity, doesn't just enter in to this planet conscious entities, predates timelessly the readiness of this earth to create the form, to host the consciousness. The evolution of this conscious entities was occurring in other places, other focus points that were also perfect for that.

(tape is flipped over)

We give her an example and we show her an example of conscious entity sitting not embodied as you know embodiment. Embodied more as a, like a flame, a flame of blue light. A flame of blue light that has exactness, energy lines, energy shapes, meridians; that has consciousness absolutely and movement and love and song and knowing and speech; has embodiment. But it isn't in atomic matter. It is in subtle matter. There are whole spheres of subtle energy matter, embodiments. More than those too, many, and each has its own purpose. Each has its own point on the journey. The journey is so much greater than you realize. And yes, all have come from some point on that journey. It has been a vast, we use the word horrendous, we use the word gasping fall, to come from subtle body embodiment to physical atomic body embodiment. The ultimate test, will the fire stay burning? What was brought here, the blue flame; the inextinguishable blue flame of perfection, brought into the very center of life force? It is what is brought into a fetus, the blue flame, the touch of that. How much can that blue flame extend and fill that embodiment of consciousness, with the greater, truer identity? Such is the bridging; such is the challenge and the victory of infusing atomic substance with full consciousness.

You will see, you will see, in the next eras of this sphere, as it becomes common place for the souls to ignite into remembrance, into full being ness, irregardless of their body in its weight, in its frailty. Irregardless of the great limitations of atomic matter. And as the eyes ignite, and as the heart and the soul ignite, there is the wave length, the extensions of this ignition into all lower forms, all lower forms of being. There is a time coming within this sphere where the flowers have nervous systems that sense. The flowers speak in their way and that the purpose is met, the creatures dance. The creatures know joy, the creatures look up, the earth becomes vibrant, even the stone becomes vibrant. And so, we leave the answer to your question, and all this could be just a guess. You are right and you are remembering.

All you need to do is paint and love and rejoice. All you need to do is remember; remember the eternal being ness you are. Rejoice in it. Assist others to have ultimate, infinite hope.

This earth is not even half way through its evolution. It is wrong to think that it is an end. It is ignorant to think that this earth is anywhere near its end. And so, what you must do is have infinite hope, infinite rejoicing, even when it's dark and know the great web in the universe. Know what this is. This is the place for the manifestation of the sons of the daughters of God. The infusing through to the very most inert of atomic matter of vibratory consciousness. And what happens here in it's moments of victory; Not only is it a wave length throughout substance of earth, but a wave length throughout universal entity. The example of Supreme Being ness existing in form.

Thank you Guidance.
